Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work. Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble. Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries. It is used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail. Name of Swamp-Root, free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

IN THE ORCHARD.

Down in the orchard, where the leaves play hide and seek all day,
I crossed the web the shadow weaves
And came where Doris lay.
Her arms were crossed above her hair,
Her eyes were curtained close,
And on her lip her dream bloomed fair
As on her cheek the rose.

The little rosy apples leaned
Between the leaves to see;
The blackbird, by the pear bough screened,
Exchanged a glance with me;
The sunbeam strove to part the boughs
And kiss her sleeping eyes.
But I turned back toward the house,
For I, for once, was wise!

A MELODY.

It United a Pair of Lovers That Had Been Estranged.
By Ida Brevoort Roberts.

Copyright, 1909, by Edwin Wardman.

It was about half past 9 when Jack Sutherland wandered into a roof garden, less because he cared to be there than because he could think of nothing else to do.

There had been a time when Jack's evenings were not spent in an aimless endeavor to make the hours fly faster, but that time was past.

The orchestra was crashing out the music of a comic opera as he stopped from the elevator, and he leisurely scanned the crowd that sat in groups around small tables sipping iced drinks.

All day the heat had been terrific, and even now, although a breeze stirred the foliage of the potted plants, a humid haze still lingered in the air and mellowed the rays of the colored lamps that only partly dispelled the darkness. Their light was sufficient to catch the glitter in the jewels of the women nearest them, but there were nooks where the friendly darkness shielded the faces of lovers and encouraged tender confidences.

As Jack passed a number of these couples on his way to a seat he turned his eyes impatiently toward the center of the inclosure where that part of the audience had congregated which had come to find amusement and forget the heat.

There the murmur of voices mingling with the music was continuous, and the deep tones of prosperous looking business men blended with the low laughter of women who, despite the heat, looked cool and fresh in their filmy gowns.

Jack nodded to one or two people as he dropped into a seat. A waiter came for his order, and after he had given it Jack lighted a cigar and, leaning back, proceeded to take note of the groups at the tables nearest him. It was one of his ways of obtaining diversion, this studying of the people about him. He liked to watch the play of expression on the various faces and to speculate about them.

He did not, however, enjoy watching lovers. Jack had a fine contempt for sentiment. It is a love affair had been full of it, and it had ended badly. But that he had quite outlived his love and even his slight feeling of bitterness toward the woman who had been able to cause him so much pain Jack often assured himself.

Thoughts of Edith brought no accompanying heartache, and his feelings for her now resembled the calm regard we entertain toward friends of former days from whom we have parted. But the affair had left him with a cynical dislike of anything that bordered on sentiment.

It amused him to think how rich in the thing he now despised the days of his courtship and short engagement had been. Edith has told him once, with a pretty flush on her cheeks and a light in her eyes, that the sight of violets always would recall to her mind the time when he had asked her to be his wife.

She had worn those flowers that evening a monstrous bunch of them that he had sent her—and Jack remembered how their perfume had filled the dining room and in some indefinable way had seemed to blend with the soft light of the shaded lamps.

It was pretty, that had been only an episode. He was glad that they had discovered their mistake in time, and he was able to look back upon that portion of his life much as we remember a dainty play that lifts us for a time above the sordid cares of the workaday world.

In the time he had known her Edith had roused him from his indifferent attitude toward life. He always must feel grateful to her for that, Jack told himself. The sight of violets brought him no regrets. The return of the waiter with the drink he had ordered roused Jack from his contemplation of an interesting group near him. The orchestra had brought the blatant music of the opera to a close and was playing an alluring waltz.

The waltz died away on the summer air, and the murmur of voices became louder, interspersed with the popping of corks and the sound of ice against thin glass.

Jack's gaze returned to the scene before him, and it was at this moment that he caught sight of Edith seated at a table a few feet from him.

He had not seen her since they parted as friends a year before, and he smiled to think that he should be able to look at her now with so little perturbation. He did not believe she knew that he was there. At any rate she gave no sign of having seen him, and Jack watched her at intervals as the figures between them swayed.

Apparently she was well and happy. Their brief love affair had passed over the surface of her life and left no ripple. Jack looked at her critically, noting her beauty and the taste displayed in her attire. He always had admired her dainty way of dressing, and as for her beauty, that was undeniable. It impressed him no less vividly now than it had in those other days when he adored her.

Suddenly, without any premonitory tuning of instruments, the orchestra broke into a catchy air that brimmed over with contagious jollity and sent a ripple of merriment running through the audience.

A queer ripple came over Jack's face as he smiled with the others. That little melody was full of memories for him. No matter how completely a thing of the past his love for Edith might be, that tune always would bring her to his mind.

There was nothing sentimental about it. It was too frankly gay for that, but it had nevertheless woven itself inextricably through all their courtship. It began with their first quarrel, an assumption of authority on his part, unwarrantable as he looked at it now, and a taunting of pride on hers.

The next evening they had met in a box at the theater and had avoided each other's eyes until the orchestra struck up that air, which by its infectious gaiety had dispelled their ill humor and caused them to look at one another and smile. After that they never heard it again, and their eyes did not meet with a look of understanding. It had ended many quarrels for them.

"When you can hear that air played without meeting my eyes, I shall know that you no longer love me," Jack once had said to Edith half in jest.

The melody in question, changing to strike the keynote of public favor, became popular, and they heard it everywhere. Sometimes in a pretty attempt at defiance Edith resolutely would keep her eyes averted and refuse to look at her lover, but she never could carry her willfulness to the end of the tune. Always before the music stopped her eyes would meet his gaze.

And this was what the orchestra was playing now, and he and she were sitting only a few feet apart, with their love for each other quite dead. It was an odd coincidence, Jack thought, smiling. How had that old tune, which belonged to a past summer, come to find a place among the popular airs of the present one? There seemed to be some invisible link that connected them—her and him and that fanciful, silly jig.

Well, there would be no love message flashed between them this time. Jack told himself this with no emotion, and his calmness made him realize how completely a thing of the past his love was. He glanced over to where she sat. The crowd had thinned out, and he could see her plainly now.

If the music stirred memories in Edith, the fact did not show in her face. Her eyes were lowered, but her lips smiled as she listened to what her companion was saying.

Suddenly she raised her head and met Jack's gaze. Whether she had seen him before he did not know, but as she looked her smile faded, and for a few seconds the two regarded each other steadily, gravely.

Then just as the music stopped something in the man's face brought her the girl's smile back again, not to her lips this time, but in her eyes, and Jack knew that she had not forgotten. He knew, too, that his presence at not caring had been a farce and that he loved her still.

It was as a man in a dream that he saw Edith rise and move toward the exit, followed by her escort. Jack also rose, and in the confusion, as a crowd filled the elevator, he managed to speak to her.

"When can I see you?" he asked. "Tomorrow," she answered without looking at him. The elevator stopped, and they were separated again, but as Jack lighted a fresh cigar and went on his homeward way life had a different look, and the clatter of horses' feet as cabs darted swiftly over the smooth asphalt beat time to a glad refrain that echoed and re-echoed in his heart, "Tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow!"—New York Press.

No Mystery About Politics.
There is nothing peculiar or mysterious about politics or international relations, says Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., in The Atlantic. When two or three men live within hail of one another, political relations begin. Politics begin when men realize that other men are forces to be considered. Men meet, boys; each drives his wagon to the right; one sells, another buys; they fence their cattle down a tree, to mend the road, to regulate county matters with the next community.

Whether they like it or not, politics have begun; ethical relations have begun; religion has come in. Be it fear, philosophy, instinct or habit, every normal man is conscious of this religious element. Men cannot separate politics from ethics nor ethics from religion; they are threefold, yet one and indivisible. From that union springs the normal law.

Rightly to understand that power is the chief problem of life, and mankind has long been busy at the task, but the immediate matter for men is to understand that what is true of two men and three gathered together is true of tens of millions. Are men to recognize this power which acts on the individual and on society or when the company is small and when the individual is affairs.

Quite Natural.
Little Johnny—Mamma, let's play I am your mother and you are my little boy.
Mamma—Very well, dear. How shall we play it?
Little Johnny—I'll tell you. You start to do something, and I'll tell you I not to.

HE GOT THE INTERVIEW.

A Story of Amos Cummings and Secretary of State Seward.

It was while Amos Cummings was the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun that he had a memorable interview with Lincoln's secretary of state, Seward. Cummings received orders one day to get certain information from Secretary Seward without fail, and accordingly he went to the secretary's office to see him. Mr. Seward did not receive the newspaper man very cordially.

"I won't talk to a representative of the Sun on that subject," said the secretary. "I am very busy. You are taking up my time, young man, and I can't be bothered with you."

In an instant Cummings was boiling with anger and hurt pride. He drew himself up, looked the secretary straight in the eyes and said: "You forget, sir, that there are three parties to this interview."

"Three?" queried Seward in surprise. "How do you make that out?" "First, sir, there is you, secretary of state and one of the foremost figures in the world of men of the day; second, there is the correspondent of the New York Sun, who has come to you on a perfectly proper errand in the service of his newspaper, and third, sir, there is an American citizen who considers himself the equal of any man on earth and who will not be insulted by you or any man alive."

The great Seward looked at Cummings and smiled. "Sit down," he said, "and tell me exactly what you want, young man." The Sun not only got the news it wanted, but also one of the best interviews with Seward ever published.—Saturday Evening Post.

Simplicity of Fun.

"The funniest thing I ever saw or heard," says Chauncey M. Depew in Success, "was the lecture of Artemus Ward, then quite unknown, on Mormons, delivered at Albany. The audience was fashionable, conservative and proper to a degree. Ward, discouraged by the coldness of the audience, finally stopped and said, after one of his best things, 'There's a joke! Suddenly, the fun of the whole entertainment came like an avalanche. The audience began to titter, then to laugh, then to roar and at the end of 15 minutes was positively in a hysterical condition. It was an illustration of the psychology of association and which, precisely the same as that which produces panics, when there are no commercial troubles and no financial difficulties.'

John Sherman on Himself.

A politician who was very near to Senator John Sherman in the campaign of 1892 says he will never forget the effect that the first kodak picture of himself had upon the senator. "Mr. Sherman had been speaking the night before in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, and the newspaper artists had taken some lifelike snap shots of him in many attitudes. To the politician the senator said, upon looking over the newspapers the following day: 'Well, well, our time for criticising the newspaper men is over. They have us to rights now. Here I am just as I am, and I'm a caricature of what I have always thought I was.'—Saturday Evening Post.

What He Lost.

The nervous commuter had one minute in which to catch his train. He was hastening exceedingly when the cries of a small boy smote upon his ear. "Hey, mister!" shouted the urchin. "Ye've lost something!" The commuter stopped and hastily counted his bundles. "What have I lost?" he panted. "Why," said the boy, "ye've lost that shine I put on yer shoes yistday. I'll give yer another for a nickel."—Philadelphia Press.

The Jolly Girl

Often changes to the jaded woman. "I can't see what's come over Mary; she used to be such a jolly girl," was the remark of a young woman visiting a married schoolmate. Marriage changes a woman. The drains and pains which are so often the sequence of marriage rob her of all vitality. Give her back her former strength and she'll be as "jolly" as a wife as she was a maid. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives back the lost strength by re-establishing the health of the delicate womanly organs. It dries the drains and stops the pains. It cures ulceration, inflammation and female weakness.

Women strong and sick women weak from chronic diseases and female weakness," writes Mrs. Allen A. Johnson, of 125 Reolian Street, Philadelphia, Pa. "I had two different doctors, and they gave me medicine which only relieved for a time. My niece advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It made me feel better. I find that after have been highly benefited. I find that after taking six bottles of Favorite Prescription and following five of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and following your advice in regard to local treatment, I am now a strong woman. Accept my sincere thanks for the interest manifested in my case and the happy results obtained."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

The Dumb Animals says the first Napoleon was asked by some of his officers to conquer and hold certain provinces of China, as Great Britain has conquered and held India. His answer was: "Better let China alone. The Chinese are harmless. They trouble no other nation, but they are a great people. We might conquer some of their provinces, but we should teach them the art of war. In time they might raise great armies—buy or build great navies and conquer France." If, as now appears, we have been waging up the four hundred millions of China, no human being now living can begin to estimate the terrible destruction and suffering of human and animal life that may follow.

The most remarkable dramatic production in many respects known to theatrical history, says the Overland Monthly, is Ben Hur, General Lew Wallace's novel of that title. The play has been running in New York City since last autumn. The production cost $71,000 before the opening night. It employs 350 people. Very nearly 250,000 people had seen the play at the time of its hundredth performance in February last. The receipts have averaged over $18,500 a week from the start. The advanced sale, covering six weeks ahead, has been $40,000 right along. The management has received daily an average of $500 in express orders and postal orders from people outside the city. Nothing like this has ever been previously known in the theatrical business.

In the recent Republican primary election in Santa Rosa the Lemmon forces were disastrously defeated. Of the 26 delegates elected twenty are adherents of O. O. Webber, while Lemmon secured only six. Two of the three delegates to the State Convention are Webber men. The dirty politics resorted to by Lemmon's County Central Committee to defeat the will of the Republicans of Sonoma City ought to consign him to political oblivion, the cry of his creatures of "clean politics" to the contrary notwithstanding.

KNOWLEDGE of the Bible will refine, enlarge and elevate the vocabulary of any one, and the girl who studies her Bible daily and reads Shakespeare, Scott, Macaulay and Ruskin will be a better talker than the who limits her reading to the daily newspaper or the latest agreeable book. Eliot are all helpful to those who would be good, bright, varied and entertaining talkers, because in all these authors you continually find wholesome thoughts expressed in forceful and strenuous English, and bit by bit you receive of the wealth these masters of English have so carefully bestowed upon their work.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

Admission Day Celebration.

The approaching celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of California's admission into the Union bids fair to be the most imposing that has occurred west of the Rocky Mountains. All Californians will be disappointed if the event should prove this to have been a false prediction. But there is little fear that it will. Every preparation that the wit of a very energetic organization could think of has been made. The parade will be stupendous and it is to be hoped that it will also be beautiful. One of the chief features of the celebration will be the lavish hospitality of the Natives. Each parlor expects to entertain all of its friends royally. But above the parade and the hospitality of the Native Sons interest will center in the great crowd. There will probably be two hundred thousand people on Market street during the parade. One does not often see such a mass of humanity and to see it is worthy of a considerable effort. At present it appears that the majority of our citizens are going to be in San Francisco on the 9th. Everybody should go and have such a good time as comes once in fifty years—should go that he may return with an enlarged idea of what it means to be a citizen of the State of California.

National Songs in the Public Schools.

The Trustees of our Grammar School are to be congratulated on securing Miss Claire Hope to teach the pupils to sing properly the national songs and "old time favorites" of our country. For two reasons this action meets with the approval of the patrons of the school—the work should be done and Miss Hope can do it well. In the course of study adopted by our County Board of Education stress is laid on the necessity of teaching the school children the words and music of our national airs if ever we are to have a population sufficiently familiar with them to be able to sing them. The majority of people who did not learn the "Star Spangled Banner," "America," and the other patriotic songs during their school days, it is safe to assert, have not learned them since. And since the greater number of schools have not until recently given any serious and systematic attention to this part of school work we have a plausible explanation of the fact that the audience-singing on public occasions is very poor. This condition will cease to be in a generation if the Trustees of other public schools act as wisely as those of our own.

Married Women May Teach.

In view of attorney's Lane's decision that married women may teach in the San Francisco schools it is surprising that the garrulous humorist has not heralded the fact that the distinguished gentleman is a benedict. Fearing that some lamentable catastrophe might come upon us as a consequence of this unparalleled neglect, a local humorist of felicitous fancy looked intently through a two-inch auger hole at the moon for one hour and then submitted a quatrain. This will not be published for the very good reason that every married woman would suspect her husband of having written it—the humorist refuses to sign his name—and then there would be trouble in Sonoma. So look out for catastrophes. Some day this town may be visited by a cyclone or a water system.

Hodge-Podge of Brainless Asininity.

The editorial matter of a newspaper stands next in importance to the great news and should be given a correspondingly important position. The Examiner has accomplished this by putting its editorials on the last page. There they may be found easily, and in the case of The Examiner they are worth finding. But why in the name of all that is appropriate does it allow the printer's devil in his ink bedaubed shoes to dance up and down the center columns in a vain endeavor to cut a pigeon wing? It is barely possible that this is permitted for the illiterate or because ink is cheaper than brains or to emphasize the seriousness of the editorials. But whatever may be the reason for this hodge-podge of brainless asininity every intelligent reader would like to see it eliminated from an otherwise agreeable page.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens. Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.
A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

HAIR

So many persons have hair that is stubborn and dull. It won't grow. What's the reason? Hair needs help just as anything else does at times. The roots require feeding. When hair stops growing it loses its luster. It looks dead.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
acts almost instantly on such hair. It awakens new life in the hair bulbs. The effect is astonishing. Your hair grows, becomes thicker, and all dandruff is removed. And the original color of early life is restored to faded or gray hair. This is always the case.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and am really astonished at the good it has done in keeping my hair from coming out. It is the best tonic I have tried, and I shall continue to recommend it to my friends."
MATTIE HOLY, Burlington, N. C.

VINEBURG EVENTS.

Jessie Burris visited Santa Rosa on business last Saturday.

A. Sondag, the accommodating Postmaster in this place, visited Sonoma Wednesday.

Postmaster Sondag of Vineburg, who recently succeeded J. H. Humphreys, informs us that there is little probability of the Vineburg postoffice being discontinued on account of free rural delivery. We are pleased to make a note of this and trust that it may be so, as the office is a great convenience to many farmers in the southeastern part of the valley.

DEATH OF MRS. ADLER.

Passes Peacefully Away at 1:30 Yesterday Afternoon.

As the years roll on, one by one the old residents of Sonoma are passing away. It becomes our painful duty to record the death this week of Mrs. Martha Adler, a pioneer woman of Sonoma.

After a lingering illness of many months she passed peacefully away at her home in this place that has sheltered her for over thirty years. Mrs. Adler was the widow of the late Lewis Adler, a pioneer of 1846, who located in Sonoma in 1848. She was a good woman and a kind neighbor and her presence will be missed in a community to whom she had endeared herself for so many years.

She leaves a son, Adam Adler; a daughter Mrs. Mille Bates, and a sister, Miss Alice Winkle, all of this place. The funeral will take place Sunday (to-morrow) at 2:30 p. m. from the family residence. The remains will be laid to rest beside those of her late husband in Mountain Cemetery. Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend.

SEQUEL TO THE GLEN ELLEN SHOOTING.

Barker, Who Was Shot by Wilpret, Disappears.

As predicted in these columns some weeks ago, Chas. Barker who was shot and dangerously wounded by G. A. Wilpret, on the O'Donnell ranch, Glen Ellen, the latter part of July, has disappeared and cannot be found. The case of the People vs. Wilpret was called in the Superior Court Wednesday, but on motion of the District Attorney was continued, as the principal witness for the prosecution, Chas. Barker, was found to be non est. He is said to be in Oregon but the efforts of Sheriff Grace to locate the much-needed witness has so far proved futile.

It will be recollected that immediately after Barker recovered from his wound he left the ranch for San Francisco. The District Attorney's office, however, was in communication with him up to a week or two ago, and he has always expressed a willingness to appear against the man who shot him. For some reason or another this was probably farthest from his thoughts. Wilpret, who claims he shot in self-defense, will no doubt be discharged from custody.

BREVITIES.

A. Sondag and Chas. Cutter took a ride on their wheels to El Verano Monday.

For harnesses go to Chas. Wilson, Main street, Petaluma. You will save money.

A. Marcy has opened a tinning and plumbing establishment next door to the Clewe block on Broadway.

Henry Weyl has given up his branch butcher shop on Broadway and now does all his business at the old stand.

A. Pinelli is having a fine windmill built in the rear of his lot on First-street East. When finished it will be one of the highest in this place.

Do you want a brand new Wheeler & Wilson $75 Sewing Machine that has never been used. If so apply at this office. This machine will be warranted and sold cheap on the installment plan.

A new book case has been set up in Miss Bryant's department of the Sonoma Grammar school. It will be used by the scholars as a receptacle for their books during holidays and vacations.

F. W. Bean and his force of artisan well-borers are still at work at La Lomata, the picturesque home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Allen near this place. A depth of 155 feet has been reached and an abundance of water struck which, however, will not flow to the surface. Every indication points to the development of flowing artesian water and the well will be sunk deeper with that object in view.

DIED.

ADLER—In Sonoma, August 31st, 1900, Mrs. Martha Adler, widow of the late Lewis Adler, a native of Heimerhausen, Germany, aged 60 years. [New York and Brooklyn papers please copy.]

SACRIFICED HER LIFE. TO SAVE HER CHILD.

A Mother's Heroism—Mrs. Frank Chelini Instantly Killed.

Mrs. Frank Chelini, residing with her husband and three children on the Chelini ranch in the eastern suburbs of town, was instantly killed Wednesday afternoon between one and two o'clock.

Two horses attached to a heavily laden hay wagon had been left standing in front of the barn, which is located a short distance from the house. They became frightened and ran away. Right in the path of the runaway was a narrow bridge upon which one of Mrs. Chelini's children was playing. The heroic mother rushed to the rescue of her child, which she succeeded in reaching and had just thrown out of harm's way when she was struck by the maddened animals and crushed beneath their hoofs and the heavy wagon.

Her chest was crushed in and she received other injuries which proved instantly fatal.

Her husband, who was in the barn loft at the time, hearing the loud noise made by the runaways, rushed to the door, and upon looking in the direction the horses had taken discovered his wife lying prone in the road. He jumped from the high loft door to the ground, imperiling his own life and rushed to his wife's side, but when he reached her and raised her tenderly in his arms the heroic wife and mother had ceased to breathe.

Mrs. Chelini, was well-known to the Italian Swiss residents of San Francisco, where she spent her girlhood days. She was born in Switzerland and was aged 32 years.

A jury was summoned by Coroner Pierce at 12 o'clock Thursday to enquire into the cause of death and the verdict was in accordance with the above facts.

In order to enable the many relatives and friends of deceased in San Francisco to attend the funeral the remains were embalmed and the funeral set for to-morrow (Sunday) at 11:30 a. m. The services will be held in St. Francis' Church, at 12 m., after which the remains will be laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery.

Back from Nome.

Percy Wilson, who left for the Nome gold fields several months ago, arrived in Sonoma last Monday. Young Wilson says Nome is a good place to stay away from at the present time. The place is over crowded, the beach diggings have about petered out and there is likely to be great suffering there the coming winter. Percy thinks it a great gold region and with rain to start the streams running many rich placer mines will be opened up on many creeks in the vicinity of Nome. Upon his arrival at the mines he procured a small hand-cart and engaged in the draying business, making between $50 and $60 per day. The cost of living, however, was high and the business did not last long, and as a result he returns home "about even." This is more than thousands of others can say who were lured to the gold fields by fabulous tales of their wealth.

Admission Day.

Through the liberality of the California Northwestern Railway Company the people along its line of railway will be enabled to take in the Admission Day Celebration in San Francisco on September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th at half fare rates. This promises to be the greatest event in the history of California and no one can afford to miss it as there will not be another celebration of the kind for the next fifty years. See the company's announcement in another column.

Collar Bone Broken.

Little Miss Helen Morris, while riding a horse last week on her father's farm, fell and broke her collar bone. The accident did not deter her from her daily rides upon the back of her pet pony and it was several days before the injury was noticed. Then her father, J. B. Morris, brought his little girl to town, and the broken bone was set by a physician.

Still More Counterfeiting.

The Secret Service has just unearthed another band of counterfeiters in a suburb of New York City, and secured a large quantity of bogus $5 bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected by counterfeiters for imitation, notably the celebrated Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals for common disorders like fever, ague, malaria, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. The Bitters sets things right in the stomach and when the stomach is in good working order it makes good blood and plenty of it. In this manner the Bitters get at the seat of strength and vitality, and restore vigor to the weak and debilitated. Beware of counterfeiters when buying. Always go to reliable druggists who have the reputation of giving what you ask for.
